SAP2000 Design Features.Q: Multiple page formats in a single file I have a single file that I would like to display on two different screens, one screen for mobile and one for an iMac. All of the content is the same except the background colors are slightly different. I am wondering if there is some sort of accepted approach on handling these two formats within a single html file. I can use two different CSS files, one for each format with different background color? I can use two different div's and make the one show below the other on different pages? Thanks A: If you want to use conditional comments (example) to do this, you could set the different background color for each screen by setting the CSS property for the background (or background-image) based on the screen width (using JavaScript on the client 3da54e8ca3
